New Advances in Infant Nutrition: Recognizing the Importance of Prebiotics and Lutein

Why join this Webcast on new advances in infant nutrition?

- Get the latest research: The expert speakers will review the recent advancement in the field of infant nutrition, most specifically related to prebiotics and lutein. The panel will review clinical studies and related literature, and discuss the relative importance of these new functional ingredients in infant formulas.
- Hear it from the experts: The presenters are three leading specialists in this area: Dr. Glenn Gibson of the University of Reading (UK), Dr. Billy R. Hammond, Jr. of the University of Georgia (USA), and Dr. Philip Sherman of the Hospital for Sick Children (Canada).
- Ask questions directly: Following the presentation, there will be a live Q&A session during which you can submit questions to the speakers by email.

Learning Objectives

At the end of this program, participants will be able to:

- Describe the advantages of prebiotics in infant nutrition
- Discuss the science of lutein and its role in the developing infant
- Recognize the advantages of adding these functional ingredients in infant formula
